Demo

III. Config

What is an environment variable?

- An environment variable, often shortened to env vars or env, is a dynamic-named value that is stored in the environment where an app runs.
- For example, a running process can query the value of the TEMP environment variable to discover a suitable location to store temporary files, or the HOME variable to find the directory structure owned by the user running the process.